Central Idea	The development of a colony can be shaped by significant people and events.	To satisfy their needs, humans use a variety of natural and man-made resources to produce energy that have an impact on the environment.	Extreme changes to the earth's surface and in its atmosphere impact on the environment and human lives.	Different forms of media are used to express a range of viewpoints that inform and influence our daily lives.	The production and consumption of, and trade in, goods and services within and between communities across the world, can have an impact on their citizens and the environment.	Responsible leaders display qualities that enable them to bring about authentic change and inspire action.
